The Hawaiian band was on board the Green.'' A number of finely decorated Japanese sampans added to the gaiety of the occasion, while the harbor tub Pioneer went out exploding Japanese day fireworks which were the finest of their kind ever seen in the city. Birds, fishes, dragons and other strange animals were among the designs and the national flags of Japan, England and America also figured conspicuously. It was noticeable that in the fireworks the English and Japanese flags were combined in many ways, symbolic of the alliance between the two nations. The only time that a combination of American and Japanese flags was noticeable was in the banners carried by the school children.

It required some little time for the big cruiser to make the turn to go out of the harbor and she was only a few feet from the shoal near the lighthouse when she was finally turn- her cold storage compartments. ed by the Intrepid.
